CVNA sent letters to Portland City Commissioners Fish and Fritz supporting the RVNA plan concepts and Off-Road Cycling Master Plan. On Earth Day, an "Earth Day Greeting" letter signed by several neighbors was hand delivered to commissioners, Mayor Hale and the bureaus saying, "The decision by the city of Portland to restore, preserve and protect the interior forest habitat, the wetlands and seven streams at the core of RVNA is both applauded and supported by Collins View residents concerned about nature conservancy."

RiverViewFriends.org was registered (4/24) and a new site was set up in order to be independent from collinsview.org, which is regulated by the CVNA board. Friends of RVNA is separate from CVNA.

About half the attendees of the RVNA open house at the Multnomah Arts Center May 4 were mountain bikers and half were Collins View residents. RVNA Management Plan will move forward, not delayed by O-RCMP. Mountain biking is excluded, as are dogs at this time.

The city's first community-initiated Neighborhood Trails Process would allow community groups to propose and construct trails in undeveloped right-of-way. It is a long-term process projected to start this summer. Neighbors have been maintaining and improving the unimproved right of way between Lobelia and Palatine for quite a while. Lobelia in this area is designated as a foot path on the SW trails map in the SW Trails inventory.
